ICHANG HELD BY SOLDIERS, LOOTED AND SET ON FIRE

Mutinous Troops Seize Yangtze River Port In Surprise Attack
OFFICES WRECKED

Messages Received Here Tell Of Outbreak And Depredations

A message received last night at the Shanghai office of the British American Tobacco Company from Ichang contains reports of outbreak of Chinese soldiery there and says that the B.A.T. branch at Ichang has been looted and that the Ichang Club has been burned.

Ichang, the Hupoh province city on the upper Yangtze, which is the point at which all goods shipped from Szechuen and the interior are trans-shipped, is in flames and is being looted by a band of soldiers that mutinied Monday night and after attacking and seizing the city set fire to it.

Details of the outbreak which have found their way down the thousand miles of the great waterway to the coast and to Shanghai are only fragmentary, but at least two authentic messages were received here yesterday by the Robert Dollar Company which established an office at Ichang last April when the company opened a steamer service up the Yangtze from Shanghai to Ichang. The two messages are as follows:

THE FIRST MESSAGE

Nov. 30, 7:45 a.m.
Ichang looted last night by soldiers. Our office looted and badly wrecked. Full details later. City on fire.

SECOND MESSAGE

Nov. 30, 10:45 a.m.
Unexpected mutiny of soldiers last night. Ichang badly looted including banks and godowns. Our office looted and badly wrecked but nothing missing as far as can be ascertained. Looting expected to continue for two days. Many fires still burning.

TELEGRAPH IMPEDED

Mr. J. H. O'Brien is the representative of the Robert Dollar Company at Ichang. It is thought that these two messages were forwarded by him and it is believed also that after the second message was sent at 10:45 o'clock, yesterday morning telegraph service was impeded or shut down altogether. Basis for this view is given by the fact that through the day yesterday no word concerning the outbreak or of commercial concerns here that have agencies at Ichang.

BUILDING ON BURN

The Ichang offices of the Robert Dollar Company are in a two-story structure, one of a row facing The Ichang Bund, a thoroughfare about 400 yards in length. It is accepted that the attack of the mutinous soldiers was centered here in the shipping business center of the city.

It is significant that one of the two messages received intimates that banking institutions have not escaped the looting. The two banks at Ichang are the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications and further indication that telegraph service from Ichang has been interrupted is given by the failure to receive word here from either of the Ichang banks. No word concerning the outbreak had been received yesterday by the Standard Oil Company whose offices are in the same building with those of the Dollar company at Ichang and other companies here which maintain offices at Ichang and which waited through the day yesterday for news from the distant up-river port included Butterfield & Swire, Mackenzie and Company and the British American Tobacco Company.

AWAIT NEWS TODAY

The offices of all these are located on The Bund at Ichang with the exception of that of the British American Tobacco Company which is located near the Ichang Club on a hill about one mile from The Bund. It was thought last night that telegraphic communication between Ichang and Hankow might be restored in the course of the night and that fuller details of the uprising will be received today.

Supreme Court Orders Compulsory Winding Up Of Eastern Syndicate

Application By Philippine National Bank, Claiming P. 33,263.43 On Five Dishonored Bills Of Exchange Is Granted By Tribunal

An order for the compulsory winding-up of the Eastern Syndicate under court supervision was granted in the British Supreme Court yesterday before Judge Skinner Turner. The Court further ordered that costs of the petitioning creditor and liquidator be paid.

The application for the winding-up of the syndicate was made by Mr. H. L. Ward on behalf of the Philippine National Bank. Mr. K. E. Newman represented the liquidator and the compromise of the syndicate who was an unsecured creditor.

An affidavit sworn in by Mr. A. M. Marques da Silva, head of the credit and collection department of the bank was submitted by Mr. Ward. It alleged that the syndicate was indebted to the bank for P. 33,263.43 on five bills of exchange. Application for payment had been made, but nothing had been done. The petitioner claimed that the bank would be prejudiced if the syndicate was allowed to wind up voluntarily. A nominal capital of P. 12,000 had been subscribed for the company, it is claimed.

Mr. Newman supported the application on behalf of his clients.

COUNSEL OPENS CASE

Mr. Ward said that the facts of the case were peculiar and he thought the court would agree that an investigation was required and the only possible way of getting the persons in charge of the company examined before the court was under such an order as he asked for. A voluntary liquidator had no power to compel the attendance, or examine any official of the company on oath or otherwise.

The syndicate was incorporated on May 20 of this year. There was little doubt but that the members of it were members of a firm which existed before the incorporation and was known as the Eastern Syndicate. He was in the dark as to whether the firm had any assets at all, but he did know that, at the incorporation of the company, the firm had undertaken business which might result in very considerable liabilities.

BANK CREDIT APPLIED FOR

They had, on April 12, of this year, applied to his clients for credit to the amount of G. $40,000, to finance certain purchases by them in America. Under that letter of credit, bills drawn by the Eastern Syndicate firm would, in due course, be presented in Shanghai for acceptance and payment. This firm had transactions in hand which might involve them in liabilities of G. $40,000.

The company was incorporated with a nominal capital of P. 12,000 divided into 400 shares; 120 shares were issued and of these latter, 111 were issued as fully paid up for consideration of the sale.

The Court: And they had a liability of G. $40,000?

Mr. Ward continued that a considerable portion of these shares were allotted to a family of the name of Simoes, one of whom was the managing director of the new company. On May 20, the company was incorporated, the first bill fell due on September 21 and was dishonored. They were all dishonored, either for non-payment or non-acceptance.

So far as it had been possible to ascertain the facts, it seemed that when the company could not finance transactions and pay for goods from the bank, Mr. Simoes, on behalf of the company, purported to release dealers who had contracts with the company on payment either by them, or to them of small sums of money, without consulting the bank or the compromise who guaranteed these contracts. This was a proceeding which, so far as the dealers might be concerned was perfectly fair, but one which went very near fraud as concerned the bank or the company.

LIQUIDATOR APPOINTED

When things got to such a point that something had to be done, Mr. Simoes calmly (according to one letter, which counsel put in) called himself a liquidator and "one would like to know what he obtained."

Mr. Newman said that, as far as the liquidator could see at present, there seemed to be no assets beyond possibly, P. 1,000. By Simoes' arrangement with the dealers, the company had liabilities.

Japan To Keep Troops Out Of Famine Areas

(Reuters Service)

Tokyo, November 30.—A correspondent of an American paper has asked the question from America:

"What number of troops Japan intends sending to the famine sections in China to supervise relief?"

Inquiries from the War and Foreign Offices have elicited denials that Japan entertains any idea of sending any troops whatever.

The Sino-Japanese Association is steadily collecting relief funds, but has not yet decided as to the methods of distribution.

The Japanese Red Cross is not equipped to undertake the task although the possibility of sending a commission to co-operate with the American Red Cross still exists.

It is probable that the distribution, however, will be done through the Japanese Associations at Shanghai and Tientsin.

VILNA TROOPS TO BE SUPPLIED BY FRENCH, PLAN

International Force Being Made Up To Oversee Vote Of State

BLOCKADE COMMISSION
Report Is To Be Made At Next Convention Of Nations' Assembly

(Reuters Service)

Bordeaux, Nov. 29 (by wireless to Koutouza).—The following is the text of a French official report of today's proceedings of the League of Nations Assembly at Geneva:

The Council of the League of Nations met this morning at half-past ten, with M. Hymans in the Chair. Senhor da Cunha (Brazil); Mr. A. J. Balfour (Great Britain); Senor Quinones de Leon (Spain); M. Viviani (France); R. Politis (Greece); Signor Schanzer (Italy) and Viscount Ishii (Japan) were present.

The Council adopted the terms of the report of the Permanent Mandates Commission.

It decided to invite the French Government, which still has a military mission at Warsaw, to organize the transport and supply of the International Force which the League is sending to the Vilna region.

SWEDEN ACCEPTS

Sweden's reply accepting the League's invitation to send a detachment to Vilna was then read. On the motion of Senhor da Cunha, the Council approved the reply drafted by the Secretary-General of the League to the letter from the German Minister for Foreign Affairs on the Eupen and Malmédy question.

The Armaments Sub-Commission met today, Lord Robert Cecil (South Africa) presiding. After an exchange of views between MM. Motta, Adelsward, Negulescu, Politis, and Lord Robert Cecil, the following proposal submitted by the Chairman was adopted provisionally:

"The Commission recommends that the Council be requested to appoint an International Blockade Commission, which shall report to the next Assembly on the measures necessary to give effect to the provisions of Article 16 of the League Covenant."

RIGHT MEMBERS

"The Commission should not be composed of more than eight members, half of whom at least should be representatives of States without permanent seats on the Council. The Commission should be empowered to call for information from any experts it thinks fit to consult."

The interpretation of the said Article 16 and also of Article 17 of the Covenant concerning the eventuality of war between two States not members of the League, or between a member of the League and a State which is not a member of the League, gave rise to a long discussion which resulted in certain legal points being carefully defined.

The Permanent Mandates Commission will consist of nine members, the majority being members of non-mandatory States. They will be selected by the Council for their personal worth and competence, and must not hold any Government post in their own country.

The annual reports of the Mandatories will be submitted to the Commission which will discuss them in the presence of an accredited representative of the Mandatory State concerned, and will forward its observations to the Council.

Geneva, Nov. 26.—The Armaments Commission of the League of Nations has adopted the resolution proposed by Lord Robert Cecil (South Africa) for the appointment of a sub-commission and the limitation of the subjects of discussion to three points, namely: the private manufacture of arms, the utility of the appointment of an investigation committee, and the organization of an armaments section of the League of Nations by the Secretariat of the League.

DEBATE ON VATICAN

Resumption Of Relations With Rome Subject In Deputies' Chamber

(Reuters Service)

Paris, Nov. 29.—Prior to his departure for France, M. Leygues received, at his hotel, Count Sforza, the Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs; the interview lasted half an hour.

In this connection, the Temps learns that the French and Italian points of view on the Greek question are closely allied. Italian circles, the journal states, are understood not to be opposed to Constantine's return to the throne, but in that case they would probably advocate a revision of the Turkish Treaty of Sevres, especially with regard to Smyrna and Thrace.

Official conversations between the French and Italian representatives in London will continue pending M. Leygues' return. MM. Berthelot and Paul Cambon will represent France.

Paris, November 29.—M. Georges Leygues left London this morning for Paris, to attend the debate in the Chamber on the resumption of diplomatic relations with the Vatican. If the debate is finished in time, the French Premier hopes to be back in London on Wednesday night or Thursday morning.

The French newspapers understand that M. Philippe Berthelot, Secretary-General for Foreign Affairs, will remain in London during the Premier's absence.

Washington, Nov. 29.—The negotiations between the United States and Japan looking to the formation of a new treaty growing out of the adoption of the Anti-Asian Land Law by Congress, were interrupted, through the visit of Secretary of State Colby to South America.

The conversations suspended last week in the absence of Ambassador Morris, will be resumed at once since Under Secretary of State Davis is fully acquainted with the negotiations and he with Ambassador Morris, could bring them to a conclusion.

State Department officials will confer with leaders of the Senate and House before the negotiations are completed.

COOLIES EXCLUDED
It was learned that the exclusion of Japanese coolies would be accomplished, not simply by an Imperial decree of the Japanese Government but by one from the American Government. This will involve legislation by Congress, probably in connection with the whole subject of immigration restrictions which are being discussed by the Senate and House Immigration Committees.

It was also learned that it was not proposed to confer full civil rights upon the Japanese in the United States, instead, there will be some safe-guarding property rights for the property which the Japanese have already legally acquired. This is described as a much narrower privilege than the enjoyment of full civil rights.

NEW BOARD PLANNED
Washington, Nov. 29.—Senator Sterling announced today that he would introduce in Congress a bill creating a Federal Immigration Board with the power to deal with all questions relating to immigration, including the right to decide the number of immigrants that will be allowed to enter the United States.

The formation of the proposed Board has not yet been determined upon but it will probably be made up of the Secretaries of State, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor, with the Chairman to be named by the President subject to confirmation by the Senate.

The Senator said that it was expected to admit only immigrants who could be assimilated.

JAPANESE GO TO BRITAIN
(Reuters Service)
London, November 26, (Delayed).—The Times notes that an unprecedented number of Japanese visitors have lately come to Great Britain, largely owing to the selection of this country instead of Germany and Austria, as was the case before the war, for the study of western methods, and also on account of the more satisfactory facilities afforded them.

The bulk of these Japanese are at London University, while several are at Edinburgh.

A delegation of Japanese recently visited Ireland, in order to study the police methods there.

Over a hundred Japanese officers are studying naval architecture and engineering here, and a new step recently taken has been the attaching of Japanese military officers to English regiments.

It is pointed out officially that there is a growing alienation from the extremists on the part of the Irish people. The recent decision of the Galway Council to sever its connection with Dail Eireann is a striking instance of this tendency, and is expected to have an important effect on public opinion throughout the South.

London, Nov. 26.—The two directors and editor of the Freeman's Journal who were tried in Dublin by court-martial on a charge of publishing false reports, calculated to cause disaffection, have been found not guilty on four charges in connection with the Tullow murders. Counsel for the defense admitted that these murders were not committed by the "Black and Tans."

The Court has now begun the hearing of two charges arising from the publication in the same paper of a story that an arrested Sinn Féiner had been brutally ill-treated in some barracks. The counsel for the Crown said the story was a pure fabrication. (The Court adjourned the hearing till December 2.)

GRIFFITH'S CASE

Head Of 'Irish Republic' Twice Elected To Parliament Seat

(By Wireless)

London, Nov. 29.—Plans have been formulated to defend England against the Sinn Féin, at a meeting of the Cabinet.

Some detailed maps of the shipping districts were found in the possession of one of the suspects when arraigned. Marks on maps were found indicating places where fires occurred.

The police searched the crowds around the Parliament buildings in search for further evidence.

Dublin, November 29.—Fifteen "Black and Tan" police have been killed in an ambush at Kilmichael near Cork.

London, Nov. 29.—The British press in discussing the Irish situation warns the Sinn Féiners that "England will not be bluffed." The press asserted the Liverpool and London attacks as a challenge.

Dublin, Nov. 29.—The Sinn Féin raids, and consequently the arrests, have been continued. Among those arrested was Mr. William Sears, a Sinn Féin member of Parliament.

Liverpool, Nov. 29.—Several arrests have been made in connection with the incendiary fires in Liverpool which have been blamed on the Sinn Féin.

London, Nov. 29.—Mr. Griffith, who was elected to Parliament by two constituencies, but has sat for neither, was arrested in bed, without his offering any resistance. He was to have addressed Irish meetings at Manchester tomorrow and Sunday, but the meetings were prohibited by the Home Secretary on the ground that they might cause disaffection.

Dail Eireann has been collecting funds for the Republican Army which is engaged in the murder campaign, and it is believed that Dail Eireann would not supply these moneys without some control over the purposes for which they are used.

It is likely that the Government will in future subject those arrested who are connected with the Republican Army to some form of internment. This indicates a certain measure of acceptance of the Republican's declaration of a state of war, and their demand to be treated as prisoners of war.

Rail Program Is Backed By Syndicate At Peking

(Reuters Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 28.—Reuters learns, in connection with the Presidential mandate of November 25 sanctioning the construction of the Chinese-mong branch of the railway, that this railway to all intents and purposes is a prolongation westwards of the Tao-Ching railway from its present terminus, Chinghua, to Menghsien on the left Bank of the Yellow River, immediately northeast of Tsanfu, an important ferry over which the bulk of the trade between Luanfu and Tzchow districts of Shansi and the South passes.

The line, which will be about 65 kilometers in length, will pass through a highly cultivated and densely populated district to which it will be of very considerable benefit by bringing it into direct communication with the main railway system of the country.

The agreement referred to in the Presidential Mandate is made with the Peking Syndicate Limited, who besides being Administrators and General Managers of the Tao-Ching Railway, possess very large mining interests in the locality.

WILL FLOAT LOAN
The agreement provides for a loan for the construction of the line the net amount of which and the conditions of its issue are to be fixed at a date not later than three years after the date of the agreement.

In the meantime the Syndicate is to advance to the Government sufficient funds to commence and carry on the construction of the line.

Both the loan and the advances are secured by a general guarantee of the Government and firstly by a mortgage on the permanent way of the railway and its earnings and secondly by certain earnings of the Tao-Ching Railway.

The construction of the line will be carried out under the control of an engineer nominated by the Syndicate and appointed by the Director of the Tao-Ching Railway Administration who will

The three mile route was thronged, and the attitude of the great majority of the onlookers was one of reverence, most of them stood bareheaded. Here and there knots of people sought to create merriment, but quiet, compelling voices, told them to "stop laughing or get behind"—behind them was only the Lifey—and "Take your hats off, or we'll shoot them off," and this brought the ill-bred scoffers to an understanding of the situation. In a few scattered cases hats were forcibly removed, and thrown into the Lifey.

ties of G. $40,000, but he only took from them about Tis. 12,000, at which the dealers were well pleased.

Beyond this contract, the company had a big commitment with the Park Union Bank as well, which the unfortunate compradore had to meet, so, altogether, the amount involved was about G. $60,000. There might be a claim against the old company for handing over not only assets, but a big liability. The compradore's claim was for something like Tis. 5,000 for salary, commission, etc., and he would also lose a guarantee of Tis. 10,000. COMPRADE IN VICTIM.

A claim was filed in the Mixed Court in September by Simons against the compradore, but it never came on for hearing, because the compradore ran away. He had never done any business in Shanghai before and he was so frightened at the developments that he ran off and counsel had only just managed to get him to come back.

After further discussion, the Court granted the application. In considering the position of Mr. Newman, the Court advised him to drop one of his clients on account of the clash of their interests.

Hankow, Nov. 30.—General Tan Yen-kai, the ousted Hunan Tuchun, arrived from Changsha today en route to Peking. The administration of the Province of Hunan is now left in the hands of General Chao Hung-ti and Lin Tau-yu.

(China Press Correspondence)
Hankow, November 26.—For the first time in China, the Hunanese have accomplished a significant feat—abolishing their Tuchun by popular vote.

The fire of the movement for abolishing Tuchun was kindled when the Hunan Provincial Assembly at Changsha made an outcry for accounts from the Tuchun offices on provincial finances. But no provincial accounts were given by the authorities, or rather the Tuchun, General Tan Yen-kai. Instead the Assemblymen were offered some account's statements from the Changsha municipal authorities.

INSIST ON ACCOUNTS

The Assemblymen were enraged as well as doubtful at the inability of Tan Yen-kai to render accounts of provincial finances of Hunan. They insisted on having the accounts, and the cry for accounts was raised with redoubled force. The fire, once started, got hotter day by day, but without any semblance of accounts being rendered by General Tan Yen-kai.

As a result a mass meeting of leading representatives from various circles in Changsha and districts was held November 23. Those present unanimously requested the official seal keeper to seal up the seal of Hunan Tuchun, thereby abolishing by popular vote the office of Tuchun in the province of Hunan.

General Chao Heng-ti was at that time to the liking of Hunanese, and chances then were that on the retirement of General Tan Yen-kai from Tuchunship, General Chao Heng-ti, Commandant of the Hunan First Division, would mostly likely be installed in the office. However, Chao had already declined to take over the seals of Military Governor of Hunan at a meeting of his military colleagues. When approached by men representing various interests in the province, he has consented on the condition that the generals in other parts of the province agree to his doing so. Accordingly Chao Heng-ti was made Commandant of Hunan by authority of the Hunan Provincial Assembly.

CIVIL POST STILL VACANT

The post of civil governor of Hunan is still pending. The most popular nominee is Lin Tzu-yu, Provincial Police Commissioner. Besides he is the chosen successor to Tan Yen-kai as Civil Governor of Hunan, but he has not yet consented to act as Civil Governor.

In spite of reports to the contrary, Tan Yen-kai has not fled Changsha. Instead he is asked by the Hunanese to render help in readjusting the affairs of Hunan, which he refused to do. The city of Changsha and other parts of Hunan are in peace: no one is fleeing away and no disturbance of any sort is expected. The Hunanese, after the exit of their notorious former Tuchun, General Chang Ching-yao from Changsha, have been most enthusiastic and loud in advocating self-government for that province. Now they have succeeded in their first step toward that: they have abolished Tuchun. The problem now facing the Hunanese is how they are going to put into practice self-government and the principles of provincialism, Hunan for Hunanese.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

When Wong Ah-sai appeared in the Mixed Court he attracted considerable attention. His features were all awry and dishevelled, as though he had been incautious enough to ask for an electric massage in a Shanghai barber shop.

The C.P.C. in charge of the prisoner explained. While Wong's face was still normal, the policeman said, he had pried himself into the residence of Sing Foo, at 1034 Tsapoo Road, and there gathered into himself Sing's best pair of silk trousers, a couple of jackets and a zinc winepot. With this collection he was just about to slip again into the night when Sing awoke, saw the intruder fading out of the doorway and gave chase. Sing chased Wong for half a mile through darkened and deserted streets, till Wong began to run out of wind and his legs began to wobble and he thought himself of the strategy of the elusive rabbit and decided to double back on his tracks. At the next alleyway, he thought, he would sidestep and shake off pursuit.

Wong sidestepped, with energy, but there wasn't any alleyway—just the darkly painted side of a brick house, against which Wong's facial individuality spread itself out into something new and strange, as Mr. Shakespeare has it. Wong had no amendments to make to the story so the Court ordered him withdrawn from the public view for two weeks, by which time his friends will possibly be able to recognise him.

MAN FOUND DEAD IN YANGTSEPOO

Discover Chinese With Head Nearly Severed Lying On Grave Mound

The Settlement police find themselves faced with another Yangtsepo murder mystery following the discovery Monday of the mutilated body of a Chinese, lying on the side of a grave mound off the Tsitsihar Road.

Examination by a police doctor tended to show that the man, who was evidently about 34 years old, had met his death within 48 hours of the time of the body's discovery. The body had evidently been carried to the mound and then dragged by the feet into the tall grass surrounding it. The head had been nearly severed from the body by a blow with a heavy knife or chopper. There was nothing about the body to give a clue toward its identification but some money was found in the pockets, indicating that robbery might not have been the motive of the crime.

There were no signs of a struggle in the vicinity of the grave mound and no trace of the instrument used in the commission of the murder could be found. The body was removed to the mortuary and the police investigation is proceeding.

KWEICHOW HEAD QUILTS IN FAVOR OF GEN. LU HSI

Latter Is Loyal To Peking Government; Tan Chiao Plans Attack

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, November 27.—The Tschun of Kweichow, General Liu Hsien-hsin, has abdicated his title in favor of General Lu Hsi, who has declared his allegiance to the Central Government. In view of this the following measures have been decided by the government:

(1) That a telegram should be addressed to General Lu Hsi by the Grand Reorganization and Consolidation Conference expressing the high commendation of the Central Government towards the General's clear attitude on this occasion.

(2) That General Liu Chuan-hou should be instructed to institute a thorough investigation into the existing conditions and circumstances regarding the Yunnan and Kweichow authorities.

(3) That General Hsiung Ku-wa should be instructed to institute a thorough investigation into the existing conditions of the Kweichow force as to its strength. General Liu Hsien-hsin is reported to have been compelled by his second in command, General Lu Hsi, to abdicate his title of Tschun of Kweichow. In these circumstances, it is the intention of the Yunnan Tschun, General Tang Chiao, to attack General Lu Hsi with a view to returning the situation to its normal order in favor of the abdicated General.

The situation in Yunnan and Kweichow has offered the Szechuen Generals a golden opportunity to launch forth their bold attempt to attack Yunnan and Kweichow, with a view to vindicating the Szechuen forces which formerly suffered tremendously from the hands of the Yunnan conquerors.

Both the 2nd and the 7th Divisions have marched towards Yunnan. The town of Hsien Han in Kweichow has been captured by the Szechuen forces. Colonel Wang Chan-jui commands the 1st Brigade of the 9th Division attacking Yunnan by way of Chan Hsiung Kuang. Colonel Tang Shih-chun commands the 3rd Brigade of the same Division in attack on Kweichow by way of Pi Chieh. Commander Yuan Ping, commanding the 4th Brigade, attacked Kweichow by way of Yiu Hsiu and Piau Ning. Other forces are also in motion.

ABROGATION OF MILITARY PACT EXPECTED SOON

Sino-Japanese Authorities Now Discussing Procedure Of Its Cancellation

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, Nov. 27.—The Chinese Government, having informally suggested, and the Japanese Government informally consented to the abrogation of the Sino-Japanese Military Pact, discussions are proceeding between the Japanese Legation and the Foreign Office in preparation for the formal announcement of cancellation, which will probably take place within a week's time by means of a mutual exchange of diplomatic notes.

The Japanese position is that the pact is not inoperative, all mutual military operations of the two governments having ceased with the withdrawal of troops from Siberia. Japan maintains that the Japanese troops doing police duty along the Chinese-Eastern Railway are not operating under the military pact, have nothing to do with it, and will not be affected by its abrogation. The fact that China has made an independent request to Japan to withdraw these troops, seems to indicate the Chinese recognition of this contention.

Minister Obata has asked his home government for instructions in regard to the reply to be made to the Chinese now asking withdrawal of these troops. It is expected that Japan will insist upon the necessity of their remaining, in view of the unsettled conditions in Manchuria and Siberia and the necessity of guarding her lines of communication connecting her forces in the Maritime province with their home base via Korea and South Manchuria.

The Chinese have to date not replied to the Japanese second note asking for apology for the participation in the Nikolayevsk massacre.

The pirates tied up the crew and stabbed two of its members who resisted.

The wounded men were taken to hospital at Woosung.

Colonial Secretary Asserts Hongkong Is Fighting Vice

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 25, (Delayed).—At question-time in the House of Commons, Col. Amery, Under-Secretary for the Colonies, stated that trading in girls for immoral purposes between Hongkong and Eastern ports was forbidden. Chinese and Europeans equally detested this traffic, and assisted to suppress it. It was a trade, however, which it was difficult to detect, especially in view of the disturbed state of the interior of China, which tended to favor prostitution. Nevertheless convictions had been secured, and these usually involved heavy fines.

Col. Amery further pointed out that the Governor's report did not corroborate the allegations that there were a number of under-aged prostitutes at Hongkong. He emphasized that no girl was allowed to enter a brothel unless the Secretary for Chinese Affairs was satisfied that the girl was 19 years of age, or over, whereas the marriageable age was 16 or 17.

He added that even an experienced European had difficulty in judging the age of a Chinese.

Famine Surtax Is Further Scored

Opposition to the surtax which is being levied in connection with famine relief, and regarding which charges of corruption are being made, is spreading to all the merchant classes.

Some 200 bean and rice merchants in a meeting at their guild have drawn up resolutions to the effect that under present business conditions, the money market and trade being so dull, the people are unable to pay the tax and, apart from the City Chamber of Commerce applying for its cancellation, they determined to refuse to pay the assessment after March 1.

Bourne from the Shanghai bank are now en route from Shanghai to Singapore to open the new institution. Mr. J. H. Wichers will be manager of the new bank.

TROOPS DESERT HERE

Fear is expressed by local authorities that numbers of disbanded troops who have deserted here will become a menace to the Settlements. Of two batches of men previously under the command of Ling Chikwang who were being passed through Shanghai to their homes, about 300 have deserted here it is said. Measures are being taken to locate these men and keep them under surveillance and if possible to get them out of the locality.

FOR SLUGGISH, CONGESTED LIVER AND BILIOUSNESS.

TRAINED NURSE ADVISES USE OF ALKALINE SALTRATES, AND TELLS WHY ORDINARY SALINES FAIL.

By ALICE LANDLES, Certified Nurse.

Contrary to common belief such drastic purgatives as Epsom, Rochelle, or other "morning salts" and powders as generally used have practically no effect upon the liver. They produce a strong aperient action by passing straight through to the lower bowel almost immediately, and flushing out the important intestinal juices, thus storing up future trouble, as anyone knows who has tried them. When the saline water is not absorbed or assimilated by the stomach or intestines at all, it of course cannot reach the liver, and this accounts for so many of my patients saying ordinary salts proved worthless for their liver disorders. I do not advise the "pill habit" as a last resort, for if a few small pills are powerful enough to affect the entire contents of the intestines, they must be strong enough to produce an exceedingly harmful reaction.

My invariable advice to chronic constipation sufferers is to drink two or three times during the day (not before breakfast) a tumbler of water in which has been dissolved a teaspoonful of Alkalia Saltrates. Any chemist can supply a few ounces of this at small cost, or easily get it for you, and it will clear out a clogged liver or regulate the bile flow more quickly than anything I know of, this being on account of the extreme rapidity with which it is absorbed. This water is pleasant to drink, has no salty taste, and you cannot drink too much of it. I have never noticed any but excellent after-effects, and results have always proved permanent.

NOTE.—We are informed that Messrs. A. S. Watson and Co. of 16 Nanking Road, Shanghai, stock a specially high grade of Alkalia Saltrates and are in a position to supply this remarkable compound at very low cost.

"BEST ELEVEN" PUZZLE STILL UNSOLVED BY U.S. FOOTBALL OBSERVERS; MANY CHOICES

Flash "Dope" From Homes Gives Cornell And Penn State The Edge Over Harvard And Princeton—Center Leads In Scoring Power—Syracuse And Pittsburgh Seem Out.

By Dudley Burrows

A study of the American intercollegiate football situation, as revealed by the team records up to and including the games played on October 24th—together with such information regarding subsequent contests as has arrived in Shanghai via wireless—sheds little or no light on the problem of which eastern eleven can be most properly adjudged the most successful, from the standpoints of both offence and defence, during the season just ended.

Princeton and Harvard, both apparently undefeated throughout the season, are still in the first flight; but other teams which seemingly won all of their games are also to be reckoned with. Of these Cornell seems to be among the leaders, with Penn State a close second. Cornell in the four games recorded up to and including October 24, had scored 170 points to their opponents' 19, without a defeat. On top of this came her 28-0 victory over Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving.

Now Pennsylvania, earlier in the season, had beaten Swarthmore by a score of 21-0, while Princeton only downed the Swarthmores to the tune of 17-6. Hence, Cornell, having easily defeated a team which did better against a common adversary than did Princeton, seems to have a slight edge on the Orange and Black.

PENN STATE'S CLAIM

Penn State, with a clean list of victories for the season (as far as the records show), also has a stout claim to this year's title. The Bellefonte eleven, in five games, piled up 204 points to its opponents' 21, which included a 47-0 victory over North Carolina, which Yale was only able to trim by a score of 21-0.

Here comes another twister. Harvard, at the opening of the season, was held to a 3-0 victory over Holy Cross; which, a few weeks later, lost to Dartmouth, 22-14. Along comes Penn State and beats Dartmouth, 14-7. What's the answer? Has Penn State an edge on Harvard—or not?

CENTER SCORES MOST

From a purely offensive standpoint—that is to say, considered simply as a scoring machine—Center College, the "Praying Parsons" from Kentucky, apparently take the palm, having piled up 255 points to their opponents' 31, the latter having all been registered by Harvard, the only conqueror of the Kentucky eleven.

But Center, up to October 24, had only tackled small colleges and thus drops out of the championship picture by reason of her defeat by the Cambridge eleven. Here again comes Penn State as a contender for honors. She is second to Center as a scoring unit, against much better-known teams.

THE "DARK HORSES"

Syracuse apparently has a good record, consisting of four victories and a 7-7 tie with Pittsburgh. The latter had beaten Geneva, West Virginia and Georgia Tech, but all by comparatively unconvincing scores.

The Army had a good record up to Thanksgiving Day, when its football representatives were compelled to bow, for the second time in succession, to the Navy, which won by the margin of a single touchdown. The 1919 encounter was won by two net goals, 6-0.

The Navy opened the season badly, losing to North Carolina State (14-7), and later to Princeton (14-0). The Middle then took a tremendous brace and waxed their West Point rivals.

THE "ALSO-RANS"

Brown ran up a string of five victories before Yale took her over the hurdles 14-0. Georgetown defeated North Carolina State (27-0) and three other teams and then fell before the Navy, 23-6.

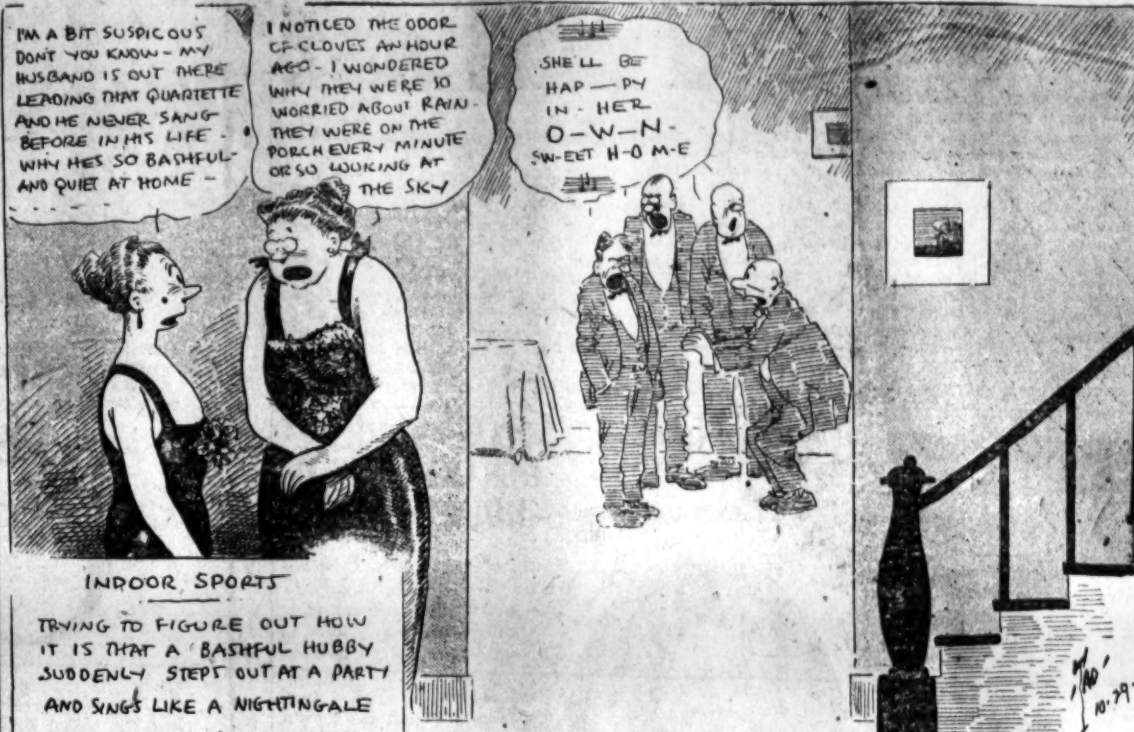

Everything considered, it looks as though Penn State and Cornell (on the uncompleted records) had run a dead heat for first place among the 1920 intercollegiate teams of the east with Harvard and Princeton on about the same terms for the third position.

GERMANY V. ENGLAND

The first football match since the war between English and German players took place in Berlin recently. The Germans won by 4-0, and the 5,000 spectators accepted the decision with amiability. The match was regarded by the British authorities as an experiment in international relations, but as the untoward incident occurred on the field of play there was no occasion for outbursts of bad feeling among the spectators. The Germans were, of course, wholehearted.

TWO GOOD GAMES OF BASKET-BALL ON "Y" FLOOR

"Pubs" Defeat "Yanks" In Hard-Fought Encounter; "Greens" Swamp "Reds"

Two games of basketball one exciting and another a walkaway were staged by teams of the Foreigner League on the floor of the Shanghai "Y" last evening, in the presence of a large gathering of fans. In the first encounter the newly-formed five from the Public School for Boys defeated the American School, 35-29; while, in the second, the "Greens" overwhelmed the "Reds," 31-9.

The Public School five was tremendously reinforced by the gigantic presence of C. D. Glaucque, former all-around athletic star of Oberlin College, at right guard. The smaller American School players, whose team-work was much superior to that of their opponents, could do little or nothing against Mr. Glaucque, once the latter set sail for their basket.

At that, "the big fellow" was especially careful not to "rough it" with his slighter adversaries, but contented himself with tossing ten field goals and one goal from foul, meanwhile urging his own quartet of youngsters on to greater effort.

C. Duff, center for the American School, and Squires, left forward, featured for the losers, while Lewis and Caccia did excellent work for the Pubs.

"GREENS" SWAMP "REDS"

The "Reds" team showed up one man shy and had to take the floor with four, instead of five, players. The "Greens" promptly proceeded to take advantage of their opportunity and ran up a score of 21-6 in the first half. Their task was rendered especially easy in the last five minutes of the first period by the additional retirement of Wilhoit, who turned his ankle.

At the request of the losing four the second period was cut to ten minutes, during which time the "Greens" added 10 points to their score while the "Reds" only managed to annex an additional three.

Our Heroes Of The Mud

By S. E. Kiser

Now put away the bat and glove; the football season's here; They've cut a gash in Charles's cheek, and Ted has lost an ear. At night when Johnny comes from school we welcome him with joy;

For one more brief and precious day the fates have spared our boy! His hair is filthy with the mud in which he had to dive, And on his clothes are clots of blood—but he is still alive!

The freshman and the sophomore fall in a close embrace; The senior knocks the junior down and steps upon his face; They break the halfback's collar bone, not meaning any harm, And here and there a luckless one lies with a shattered arm. The captain signals: "Six, eight, four, five, seven, three, two, nine!"

And then falls back, to play no more; he has a twisted spine. The cheering people fill the stands; the happy maidens blush When George's trousers are torn off—then comes a sudden hush! Is Roberts killed or merely stunned? The doctors rush to see; No matter, though, the substitute is as good a man as he! Oh, happy days! Who minds the spill? Our heroes of the mud Again provide us with a thrill by spilling human blood.

NEW YORK LAUDS EFFORT TO KEEP BOXERS IN LINE

No Infringements Of Rules.
Or Game Will Go Under,
Newspapers Say

(New York Times)

Those dwellers in the community of New York, and also the State bearing the same label, who have the real interests of the sport of boxing at heart—which classification includes all those who know what genuinely fine exercise and spectacle the game affords when properly conducted—are quick in their appreciation of the action of the Commission in inflicting speedy penalties the other day upon four boxers guilty of infringement of the legal and ethical tenets of clean sportsmanship.

The quartet of pugilists whose misdeeds called forth the bolts of the Johnson tribunal had erred in four different ways. One case condemned by the board involved a charge of foul fighting. Another youth was punished for quitting under fire, and a third for lack of caution in the language used when disqualified by the referee. The fourth boxer was ten pounds over the weight at which he had contracted to enter the ring.

GUARD THE SPORT

It was not only eminently proper, but it was necessary that these infractions of the statute provisions designed to guard and preserve the sport should lead to punishment, and that right speedily, for the sake of the lesson to be drawn therefrom by a class, many of whom need frequent lessons—namely, the pugilists themselves.

In the days when unavowed conditions, due to equally unavowed managers and promoters, were being allowed to throttle boxing hereabouts an unhappily large proportion of the boxers acquired the idea that the game was a shady one, to be practised in the shade, and that they could very well dispense with real sportsmanlike standards.

Record Money For Six-Day Bike Men

Final plans for this year's six day bicycle race in New York have been completed. It is understood the riders in this year's race will strive for the greatest purses ever offered in the six-day wheel oval.

Tex Rickard, Garden promoter; the National Cycling Association, John M. Chapman of the Newark Velodrome, and Charles H. Hanson, Brooklyn promoter, have joined forces in the promotion of the event. It has been definitely settled that the grind will be held during the week commencing Dec. 5. The customary sprinting events will be held preceding the opening of the six-day event.

Already plans have been completed for the entrance of ten foreign teams.

MAN-O-WAR, WONDER HORSE, HAS RUN HIS LAST RACE; IS RETIRED TO STUD BY OWNER

Hope That Riddle Would Send Conqueror Of 'Sir Barton' To England Goes Aglimmering—Future Home Will Be The Daingerfield Breeding Farm In Kentucky

By "Grandstand"

After all, Man-o-War, Samuel D. Riddle's mighty thoroughbred, will not journey to England in quest of the equine championship of the world. Worse yet, from the public's standpoint, the sensational three-year-old wonder horse will probably never be seen in a race again, Mr. Riddle having definitely determined to retire him to Stud, according to recent advice from New York.

Discussing this decision in the New York World of October 26, George Daley, dean of American race-writers, comments as follows:

"One finds it hard to approve the decision of Samuel D. Riddle to retire Man-o-War without giving this remarkable piece of thoroughbred machinery the opportunity to prove his greatness in England as he has in this country. We are so confident on this side of the Atlantic that his equal has never been seen that it has become almost a matter of national pride to convince the sceptics abroad of his superior quality."

"It seems a pity, then, that opportunity should not be given this wonder horse to add to his own fame and to the prestige of the American breeding industry by winning the Ascot Gold Cup in England next June. It would simply be a matter of condition. No horse of this day or generation can beat him at equal weights."

THAT LAST GREAT RACE
"It was a privilege to see this amazing son of Fair Play—Mahubah run his last race in beating Sir Barton at the Kenilworth Park track at Windsor, Ont. The picture of him that day will never be erased; the thrill will never be forgotten. The easy, yet commanding way in which he fairly tiptoed another great horse was so convincing of his superlative merit that a momentary feeling of regret almost smothered the feeling of elation—regret that every true lover of the thoroughbred was not on hand to enjoy the spectacle and to acquire the same conviction."

"Mr. Riddle can hardly be blamed for an unwillingness to subject his great horse to the risks of ocean travel and changes in climate and water; and yet the advantages to be gained, according to most horsemen, would be well worth the risks involved."

OVERSEAS OPPORTUNITIES
"Jack Joyner, a trainer of international reputation, who has raced much in England, prepared a list of from fifteen to twenty stakes, a day or two ago, for which Man-o-War would be eligible if shipped abroad. The distances run from six furlongs to three miles and the aggregate value is not far short of $100,000. "These stakes include the Coronation Cup of $10,000 and a gold cup, at one mile and a half; the Ascot Gold Cup of $20,000, at two miles and a half; the Alexandra Plate of $10,000, at three miles; the Goodwood Cup of $5,000, at two miles and a half; the Doncaster Cup of $6,000 and a gold cup, at two miles and a half; and the Jockey Club Stakes at $4,000 and a gold cup, at two miles and a quarter."

AN ODDIOUS COMPARISON
"Comparisons are odious, and in this case particularly so when the opportunities of a four-year-old in England are considered with the opportunities for a good horse of that age in this country, where weight-for-age races are so few and far between and of such small value."

The stud fee of Man-o-War has not yet been settled, but it is sure to be $2,500, which is equivalent to the top price in England, with a possible exception here and there.

Literary Department Of American Woman's Club Is Studying Chinese Art

Membets Hear Interesting Paper On "Blanc De Chine" Given By Mrs. H. K. Wright; Is First Of Year On Porcelains

The Literary Department of the American Woman's Club, under the direction of Mrs. H. A. Wilbur, chairman, will make an interesting study of Chinese art this year. Features of the course of study will be the reading of a series of papers on the subject by art critics and visits to a number of art collections in the city.

A paper of value on "Blanc De Chine," which was read at a recent meeting of the department by Mrs. H. K. Wright is as follows:

"This paper being the first one on porcelain for the year it seems well, at the risk of repeating some things said last year, to give a brief introduction to the subject in general, before taking up the theme for the day.

DEFINES PORCELAIN

"Bushell, probably our greatest authority on the subject defines porcelain as a white, hard pottery which has been vitrified and made translucent by firing. He also says that all Chinese porcelain is of the hard paste variety, that is, containing only natural elements in the composition of the body and the glaze. He further tells us that the body of porcelain consists essentially of two elements that is the white clay, or kaolin, the unctuous and infusible element, which gives plasticity to the paste, and the felspathic stone, or petuntse, which is fusible at a high temperature, and gives transparency to the porcelain. (Of the two Chinese names, kaolin is that of a locality where the best porcelain earth is mined; petuntse, literally "white briquettes," refers to the shape in which the finely pulverized porcelain stone is brought to the potteries, after it has been submitted to the preliminary processes of pounding and decantation.)

TWO ARE MIXED

"The two are mixed together with water to form a paste which is made into the shape required either by lathe or mould. The piece is then exposed to the sun to dry and, when dry, the color and glaze are applied. This is usually done in one of three ways—the color is either applied first and the glaze after, so that the colors appear under the glaze as in blue and white; or the two are mixed together and applied, as in celadon and single colored decoration generally; or the glaze is applied first and the color after, so that the colors appear over the glaze as in the polychrome decoration.

"The firing is done, as a rule, immediately after the application of the glaze, so that in over-glaze decoration the piece must have passed through the kiln before the colors can be applied, and to fix them a second firing is necessary.

"In actual practice many other materials are added to the kaolin and petuntse in the preparation of porcelain, but they are the essential elements. In the composition of the glaze petuntse is also used, but for this purpose must be of the very best quality. It is mixed with purified lime and water and put on the raw body with a brush by dipping or insufflation."

BY CLEAR NOTE

"The Chinese describe porcelain as a hard compact fine-grained pottery which may be distinguished from ordinary pottery or earthen ware by the clear musical note which it gives out on percussion, and by the test that it cannot be scratched with a knife.

"Here let us quote what Blacker says with regard to the Chinese and porcelain making: 'If the Chinese have not yet returned to that state where they have forgotten entirely the art of making porcelain, at least they have lost the secret of those admirable productions—the forms so pure, the glaze so marvellous, the enamel so sparkling, the decoration so diversified, and the paintings so exquisite—which remain with us as monuments of an age when there must have been such art in the ceramic world as has never been seen since.'

"Gilland says: 'There is reason to believe that from early dates the Chinese endeavored to imitate ivory in the same way that they did jade. It would seem that, to begin with, porcelain was not valued by the Chinese for its own sake so much as a means of imitating more costly articles.'

DATES FAR BACK

"Chinese literature ascribes the invention of porcelain to a period some 25 centuries before Christ. Foreign experts are by no means certain that the art existed before the seventh century after Christ. No trace of any earlier porcelain can be found, and it is doubtful whether, until the time of the Ming (1368 to 1644 A.D.), any other porcelain than celadons or single colored glazes were manufactured.

"Bushell says that it is generally agreed porcelain was first made in China; but that authorities differ widely in fixing a date for its invention. Franks tells us that the manufacture of porcelain proper, in China, is considered to have commenced under the Han dynasty, between 206 B.C. and 87 A.D. We also learn from him that in 1171 'we first find any distinct mention of porcelain out of China. In that year Saladin sent to 'Nur-ed-din' as presents forty pieces of Chinese porcelain.'

BLANC DE CHINE

"We now come to our subject for the day, and using Hobson as our basis let us see what he says about Blanc de Chine: 'The Fukien porcelain par excellence is a white ware of distinctive character and great beauty which was, and still is, made at Te-hua Hsien, in the central part of the province. The T'ao Lu informs us that the porcelain industry at Te-hua began in the Ming dynasty, that the cups and bowls usually had a spreading rim, that the ware was known as pai te'u (white porcelain), that it was rich and lustrous but, as a rule, thick and that images of Buddha were beautiful.'

"This condensed account is supplemented by a few remarks in the K'ang Hsi Encyclopedia, from which we gather that the material for the ware was mined in the hills behind the Ch'eng monastery and that it was very carefully prepared, but if the porcelain was worked thin it was liable to 'lose shape in the kiln, and if it was too thick it was liable to crack. At first it was very expensive, but by the time of writing (about 1700) it was widely distributed and no longer dear.

TE HUA PORCELAIN

"Te-hua porcelain is, in fact, a fine white, highly vitrified material, as a rule very translucent and covered with a soft looking, yellow glaze which blends so intimately with the body that they seem to be part and parcel of one another. The glaze varies in tone from ivory or cream white to the color of skim milk, and its texture may be aptly described by the homely comparison with blanc-mange. When the ivory color is suffused by a faint rosy tinge, it is specially prized; but I can find no reason for supposing that the cream white and milk white tints represent different periods of the ware. On the contrary, there is good evidence to show that they were made concurrently.

DETERMINING DATE

"As the ware is with few exceptions plain white or white decorated with incised, impressed, moulded, or applied ornaments of a rather formal and often archaic character, there will always be a difficulty in determining the date of the finer specimens, viz., whether they are Ming or early Ch'ing. The nature of the ware itself is a most uncertain guide. The ware is still made at the present day, and the Ming specimens in modern collections are likely to be the exception.

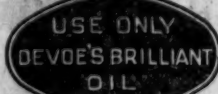

"Let us also see what Blacker says regarding the Fukien porcelain: 'The oriental artists and potters from a material which seemed to offer but little resource proceeded to work wonders. By the side of the small sacrificial cups destined for religious uses with the glassy glaze and a tone which recalls that of wax or ivory, in the form of the horn of the rhinoceros or of the flowers of the lotus, which was the plant pre-eminently sacred, one is able to admire examples perfect in execution of which the texture is so thin and fine that it seems dangerous even to touch them.'

"The greater part is decorated with ornaments in white or in white slip, which by a few simple strokes, or by a delicate tracery, almost inconceivably beautifies the limited surface. Garlands and detached bouquets of flowers have been engraved upon the wet or the dry clay so finely—indeed so exquisitely, that they cannot be seen unless held up to the light. Here the sacred dragon winds round the cup as if he wished to defend it from profane hands, and (Continued on Page 7)

After twenty eight years study by skilled engineers of the world's largest manufacturers of oil burning devices it is no exaggeration to label the result of these years of scientific development—the Perfection Oil Heater.

Chinese Girl Silk Reelers Go To New York Exposition

Three Chinese girls will accompany the Chinese delegation to the International Silk Exposition to be held in New York in February for the purpose of giving a demonstration of silk reeling.

The women are experienced silk reelers and will show how the silk is unreel from the cocoon and these reeled into skeins.

The reeling women are Chin Mei, who is 33 years old, a native of Wush, and has been working as a reeling girl for 20 years; Yin Mei, a 16 year old girl who has had four years experience in Wush and Mei Ling, 32 years old, a native of Changchow who for 15 years has been a silk reeler.

Mr. Sze Yu-ming, Chinese Changchow who for 15 years has been appointed by the Peking Government to be the official delegate to the Exposition. The five delegates sent from Shanghai by the local silk organisations will act as experts.

COLLEGE WOMEN MAY JOIN WITH ALUMNAE IN U.S.

An important meeting of the Woman's College Club was held yesterday afternoon when a committee was appointed to consider the question of affiliation with the American Collegiate Alumnae.

Miss Mary Markham of the American Consulate, presented the matter and stated that the Shanghai College Club had the opportunity of becoming the first branch of the American Collegiate Alumnae in the Orient.

Miss Markham represented Mrs. Dane Coolidge, a leading educationalist of America who was in Shanghai recently, in urging the club to take steps toward affiliation.

Miss Markham presented, also, the question of the forming of an International Relationship Committee. The purpose of this committee will be to advise Chinese students who are planning on going to America to attend college and universities there.

A committee of the College Club will be appointed to investigate this question.

Miss Mayling Soong, acting president of the club, resigned her office as she is leaving Shanghai for several weeks and Mrs. H. T. Sallor was appointed to fill this office.

The members of the club met at the home of Mrs. Maurice Benjamin, 52 Avenue du Roi Albert, early in the afternoon for the purpose of making garments for the famine sufferers. The garments will be given to the Woman's Relief Association for shipment.

The December meeting of the Club will be held at the McIntyre School. The program is to be under the direction of Mrs. Max Cavanagh and will feature Christmas carols.

Eleanor Haber, American Artist, To Entertain Here

Miss Eleanor Haber, one of the leading comedienne of America, who was for seven years a headliner on the Orpheum circuit, and who entertained thousands of soldiers in Europe during the war, has arrived in Shanghai.

Miss Haber is a very popular artist and has been a most successful entertainer in the homes of New York and San Francisco families including the Crockers, Phelans, and W. K. Vanderbilts. During her stay in Shanghai, Miss Haber will appear probably before the American Woman's Club.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT

Mrs. Max Cavanagh read a paper of interest on "Primitive Music" at the meeting of the Music Department of the American Woman's Club yesterday afternoon. The meeting, which was held in Mrs. W. S. Bardarson's apartment at the Astor House, was well attended.

SOCIAL SERVICE DEPARTMENT TO HOLD TEA DANCE

A feature of the Christmas bazaar which is to be given by the Social Service Department of the American Woman's Club on December 14 at the Carlton Cafe, is a tea dance.

Dancing will be enjoyed from 4:30 until 7 o'clock and $1 will be charged for tea. The full Carlton orchestra will play the latest jazz music and every one is promised a jolly time.

There will be no admission charge to the Carlton. Mrs. James Macdonell, chairman of the Social Service Department, stated yesterday that the sale will be held for the purpose of carrying on the social welfare work which the club is doing in Shanghai. The Social Service department is called upon constantly for various donations and funds are needed to help meet the worthy cases.

A committee of women are working to make the affair a success and many attractive booths displaying articles needed for Christmas gifts are promised.

KING'S DAUGHTERS POSTPONE SALE

Affair Announced For Tuesday
Will Be Held On December 20

The King's Daughters will hold a Christmas sale in the club rooms, 5 North Szechow Road, December 20 from 2 until 7 o'clock. The sale was planned originally to be held on December 2, but due to the bazaar announced by the ladies of the Union Church on December 4, the King's Daughters decided to postpone their affair until a later date.

A Buddhist god only appears when a colored liquid is poured into the cup, which then shows up the lines, before invisible, engraved in the paste.

IN BRITISH MUSEUM

There are said to be more than one hundred specimens of Fukien porcelain in the British Museum including a number of figures for which the factories were specially noted, of deities and sages such as Kuan-yin, goddess of Mercy; Kuan-yu, god of war; the Taoist Immortals; besides small groups representing romantic or mythological subjects.

The god of riches is often found as a white statuette, as well as Poutai, the god of contentment, with a broad smile and round, uncovered stomach; also the god of longevity, with an enormous bald head. But the favorite subject of the Te-hua modeller was the beautiful and gracious figure of Kuan-yin, represented in various poses as standing on a cloud base with flowing robes, seated in contemplation on a rocky pedestal, or enthroned between her two attributes, the dove—which often carries a necklace of pearls—and the vase of nectar, while at her feet on either side stand two diminutive figures representing (according to De Groot) her follower Lung Nu (the dragon maid), holding a pearl, and the devoted comrade of her earthly adventures Chen Tsai.

DEITY IN DOUBT

"According to Hobson the Kuan-yin of this group is reputed to have been the daughter of a legendary eastern King named Miao-chuang but other accounts make the deity a Chinese version of the Buddhist Avalokitesvara, and it is certain that her representations as the Kuan-yin with eleven heads and again with a thousand hands reflect Indian traditions. In these manifestations the sex of the deity is left in doubt, but there can be no question on that head when she is represented with a babe in her arms as Kuan-yin the Mother, to whom childless women pray, a figure strangely resembling our images of the Virgin and Child.

GOODNESS AND MERCY
"Blacker tells us that Kuan-yin is a mysterious being, the personification of mercy and goodness, who protects the sailors and saves them from shipwreck, and who takes pity on those who suffer. In hell and intercedes for them. She is also the giver of children, the bearer of prayer. Kuan-yin has many attributes and emblems. Sometimes she has a diadem on her head ornamented with images of Buddha, of the rest seated on a throne of lotus in memory of the miraculous bridge which the gods constructed to enable her to cross the sea.

"Those of us who have had the privilege of seeing Mr. Dolgorouckoff's splendid collection of Blanc de Chine will remember the many figures of Kuan-yin found there, both sitting and standing, with and without a child; also in various colorings from cream white to blue white, or almost grey. Then, too, there are many beautiful libation cups (more than 40) and figures of the god of contentment, and other lesser deities.

TE-HUA VESSELS

"As for the vessels of Te-hua porcelain, according to Hobson, they consist chiefly of incense vases and incense burners, libation cups, shaped after bronze or rhinoceros horn models, brush pots, wine cups, water vessels for the study table and the like (often beautifully modelled in the form of lotus leaves or flowers), boxes, tea and wine pots, cups and bowls, and more rarely vases.

From the same source we learn that among the Te-hua porcelains in the British Museum are no fewer than nine specimens with figures in European costumes which date from the middle to the end of the seventeenth century. One, a soldier apparently Dutch, about 1650, is well modelled in deliciously mellow and translucent cream white porcelain. (Another proof that it is most difficult to decide the age of the ware from its appearance). Most of the other specimens of this group are more roughly designed, and vary in tint from cream to milk white.

IN FUKIEN PROVINCE

"It is said that the natives of Fukien, province are among the most superstitious of the Chinese, and Bushell sees a reflection of the religious temperament in the nature of the Te-hua wares. If this is so, Hobson thinks, they must have had exalted opinions of their European visitors, whom they often furnished with the attributes of Chinese divalities, representing them in positions and poses which seem to caricature native deities and sages. There is, for instance, an ornament in form of a mountain retreat with a shrine in which is seated a figure in a three-cornered European hat and a Buddha-like attitude. Another group consists of a European posing as an Arhat, and another of a European standing on a dragon's head which would symbolize to the Chinese the attainment of the highest literary honors.

"We learn that an extensive trade was done with European merchants and their influence is seen in many of the wares, such as coffee cups with handles and other things. The appearance of some of these pieces has led serious students to mistake them for early European porcelains. A French writer mentions the fact that some Chinese Chien potters had in the past removed to Fukien in the hope of making profits out of the European traders at Amoy, and that they had taken their plant and even their materials with them, but that the entire enterprise was a failure.

COMPARED WITH EUROPEAN

"On the other hand the influence of the Te-hua wares is obvious in many of the early European porcelains which were often closely modelled on the Fukien white. We are told that there is a striking similarity between the creamy soft paste porcelain of St. Cloud and the creamy variety of the blanc de Chine, both having the same mellow, melting appearance in the glaze.

"To quote Hobson: 'It would be possible to guess from these European copies, if we had no other means, the character of the Te-hua porcelain of the K'ang Hsi period with its quaintly moulded forms, its relief decoration of prunus sprigs, figures of immortals, deer, etc., the only conspicuously absent type being the incised ornament which was unsuited to the European ware. (Footnote: Incised designs on Fukien wares consist of the ordinary decoration etched in the body of the ware, and of inscriptions which have evidently been cut through the glaze before it was fired. The latter often occur on wine cups and are usually poetical sentiments or aphorisms, e.g., 'In business be pure as the wind.' 'Amidst the green wine cups we rejoice.' But there is no lack of actual specimens of the period of active export which extended from about 1,650 to 1,750. Naturally they vary greatly in quality, which depends on the purity and translucence of the ware whether it be cream or milk white, and on the soft aspect and rich lustre of the glaze.

"Occasionally one finds among the Te-hua wares a specimen with dry appearance and crazed or discolored glaze, defects due to faulty firing or to burial in damp soil. Such pieces are surprising in a ware with such apparent homogeneity of body and glaze; and the crazed examples might be easily mistaken for one of the 't'ing' (or early 'Ting' ware) types.

OF MODERN WARE

"With reference to the modern ware, Brinkley says: 'A considerable number of specimens are now produced and panned off upon unwary collectors. But the amateur can easily avoid such deceptions if he remembers that in genuine pieces of ivory white the ware is always translucent when held up to the light, a property which, if not entirely absent, is only possessed in a comparatively slight degree by the modern product. The general quality of the glaze, and the technique of a piece should be sufficient guides, but if any doubt remains an examination of the base of the specimens will probably dispel it. In the old ware the bottom of a vase or bowl, though carefully finished, is left uncovered, whereas the modern potter is fond of hiding his inferior paste by roughly over-spreading it with a coat of glaze.

"Probably these observations are in the main correct, but experience shows that relative opacity and glazed bases are by no means confined to modern wares. Still, if the collector aims at acquiring pieces of good color, whether cream or milk white, with translucent body, pure glaze and sharp modelling, he is not likely to go far astray.

MOULDED INTO FIGURES

"We learn from Blacker that among the finest white porcelains is one kind having a hard and compact paste which lends itself easily to the mould but is not suitable to the turning wheel. Nearly all the pieces of this ware are moulded into figures, incense burners, etc., and on looking into the interior the roughness and unevenness of the paste can be easily seen, even the marks left by the fingers of the workmen quite plain, and the bottom always has the imprint of the canvas on which these pieces are placed after having been moulded.

"He also tells us of a white biscuit class which is very rare, often having two walls or divisions, of which the outer one only is biscuit, pierced with a fine network or trellis of various patterns, through which the interior wall can be seen. Among the trellis many Chinese characters are to be found, such as the emblem of longevity. The piercing of the outer wall is often elaborate, and the cover glazes give a variety of colors equal to that found upon ordinary China. From the same authority we learn of a very rare form of decoration which is met with in white, but only occasionally. The surface is covered with very small white points and such porcelain has been called chicken skin. It may be noted that these points are not enamelled, either because they were applied upon the glaze or because the enamel ran off them in the firing.

"There is a difference of opinion as to whether or not this Fukien ware was ever painted, and the question has been complicated by the existence of many pieces of it which have been enamelled in Europe. And Hobson tells us that in the first half of the eighteenth century in Holland, Germany and elsewhere, there were decorators busy enamelling white porcelain of whatever kind they could get, and the blanc de Chine offered a ready subject for this treatment.

IN ORIENTAL TASTE

"The decoration thus added was usually in oriental taste, and might be epitaphed with indifferent Chinese work. Many of these pieces are in the British Museum. On the other hand, there are in the same collection two cups with roughly painted floral designs in green and red, which are obviously Chinese, but which seem to have been painted in a mechanical sort of way. One piece of this painted Fukien ware may be described in order to show the style of painting affected. 'It is executed in leaf green, lustrous red, and the turquoise green which we associate with the Wan Li period and the form—a double bottomed bowl—is likewise reminiscent of the Ming dynasty.

"Authorities agree that the majority of the pieces of this porcelain are unmarked, and so there is little to guide in arriving at a just estimate as to their age. Blacker says: 'The whole white porcelain family whether we consider the beautiful creamy ivory ware, or the dead white, or the blue tinged white is rarely marked, and when a mark is used generally it is a seal character moulded or cut in the paste.'

"In this connection Hobson says that marks were occasionally used by the Te-hua potters, either incised or stamped in seal form, on the bottoms of cups and other vessels, and on the back of figures. Sign marks are rare. Others consist of potters' marks, too often illegible because the thick glaze has filled up the hollows of the stamps, fanciful seal marks, frets, whorls and occasionally the swastika symbol.

WOMAN'S CLUB MOTHER'S DEPT. MEETS TODAY

The Mother's Department of the American Woman's Club will meet today at 10:30 o'clock at the Carlton Cafe with Mrs. W. G. Hiltner in the chair.

Mrs. R. T. Bryan will read a paper presenting R. C. Berry's system of "Practical Child Training," dealing with the chapters on Obedience and Self Control. Mrs. G. T. Robinson will review Hillier's "Child Training," and Mrs. E. H. Cole, Mrs. Stoner's "Natural Education."

Shanghai Community Chorus

Over 200 Chinese singers are preparing for what promises to be the finest concert ever given by Chinese musicians. The occasion is the second annual Christmas concert of the Shanghai Community Chorus which will be given in the Town Hall on the afternoon of December 22 and evening of December 23.

The organization has this year followed a different plan in recruiting its voices. An examining committee under the chairmanship of Miss Myra B. Olive visited the various Chinese churches and schools and tested the voices of all who wished to enter the chorus.

Besides some of the most popular Christmas Carols, the chorus will sing Gounod's "Sanctus," the "Inflammatus" from "Stabat Mater," "The Heavens are Telling" from the "Creation" and other numbers.

Foreign Engineer In China Discussed By Speaker At Engineering Society Meeting

Qualifications Demanded And Attitude Necessary Described By Mr. J.S.S. Cooper In Interesting Paper Delivered Yesterday Afternoon

Discussing the foreign engineer in China, Mr. J. S. S. Cooper read an interesting paper before the Engineering Society of China at its regular meeting held yesterday afternoon in the Royal Asiatic Society Hall. Mr. Cooper described the qualifications necessary for a foreign engineer in this country and treated at length the attitude that the engineer should maintain toward China and the Chinese.

Mr. Cooper began by deploring the fact that the standing of engineers in China among their fellow citizens is not higher, and urged the Engineering Society of China to set in such a way as to raise that standing.

After examining the reasons that being engineers to China and keep them there, he concludes that, making all due allowance for other causes, the deciding factor is usually personal, or even selfish. Beyond this, however, he claims that engineers have a duty to China, and this duty is the real keynote of the whole paper. He said:

DUTY OF THE ENGINEER

"The commercial engineer who sells plant he knows to be unsuitable, the railway engineer who ceases to insist on proper construction, the consultant who allows himself to be overborne by the persistence of ignorant clients, the public utility engineer who thinks that just and equal service to all is a hopeless ideal, and the construction designer who takes advantage of the absence of proper building laws and safety codes—each one of these is failing in his duty to China and is betraying a trust which circumstances and the blind gods of chance have placed in his keeping.

"If it is right to say that each individual engineer has a duty to China, surely it is right to claim that the Engineering Society of China has a still heavier responsibility towards the country whose name it has assumed. It is greatly to the society's credit that in the past it has recognized this responsibility and has tried sincerely to meet it. The appointment of committees to study, standardization and education in the interests of our Chinese neighbors without question arose from this sense of duty, and if these labors have not been fully successful, it should be recognized that this has been due largely to causes beyond the society's control. High aims should evoke not criticism, but encouragement and praise, and it is devoutly to be hoped that this society will on no account abandon its efforts to help the country in which we live."

COMMERCIAL ENGINEER
The speaker then proceeded to the consideration of the different kinds of engineer in China, and makes a vigorous defense of the commercial engineer. It is claimed that commercial work gives the fullest scope not only for technical ability but also for the highest mental and moral qualifications. Continuing, Mr. Cooper said:

"However many specialists the merchant may employ, there are never enough to meet all the extraordinary demands of the Chinese engineer. The commercial engineer thus finds himself grappling one hour with electrical problems, the next with matters connected with railways, or chemical plants, or coal mines, or textile machinery, or paper making, or water supply, or motor boats, or any one of the endless variety of questions that can spring from 400,000,000 brains."

An examination then followed of the difficulties which concern engineers in China. These are enumerated as absence of a stable system of law; ignorance of the people in technical matters; scarcity of engineering materials; great distances and slow communications; language difficulties and customs and usages of the country.

CHINA'S SIZE
Apropos of the fourth of these points the author speaker said:

"It is in many ways a great pity that the ordinary atlas consists of pages of equal size, allotting the same space to the maps of England and China. It would help to a better sense of proportion if all maps of England were printed on a sheet of note-paper, while maps of China were allowed the space of an ordinary dining table. This would give a fair comparison in miles. If, however, for miles is substituted time of transit, the map of China should be painted on the entire wall of a large house. From London to Aberdeen is a train ride. From Shanghai to Peking or Canton is a journey, and from Hongkong to Chengtu or Lanchowfu is an expedition."

The speaker concluded by a statement of the qualifications specially needed for work in this country, sound technical training, particularly in first principles; a good character, robust health, willingness to learn, knowledge of human nature, adaptability and resource, and willingness to sympathize with and like the Chinese.

Of the last mentioned qualification the following paragraph may be quoted:

"The seventh and last of the author's list of qualifications is, in his opinion, by no means the least. Curiously enough, there seem to be two well-defined groups of foreign residents when classified according to their attitude towards the Chinese.

THOSE WHO SYMPATHIZE
"The great majority of foreigners fall in the first group—those who like and sympathize with the Chinese, admire their abilities, and make allowances for their foibles. The other class, fortunately very much in the minority, dislike and look down upon their Chinese neighbors, see in them no abilities to admire, and consider them stupid and objectionable. This attitude is undoubtedly due to an entire absence of sympathy and of desire to sympathize.

"Whatever may be the rights and wrongs of the case, there is no possible question as to which of these two classes will find a stay in China at once agreeable and successful. Persons of the second group should be dissuaded by all possible means from taking up work in this country. The only difficulty is that before coming to China members of the two divsions cannot usually be distinguished. It would, however, be wise for employers to eschew anyone known to be an upholder of the 'dam nigger' theory."

The reading of the paper was followed closely and at the termination an interesting discussion took place.

"PRICELESS"
is a popular way of describing anything which has proved to be of exceptional value, and may therefore be employed to describe that old and favorite preparation—Beecham's Pills. The ever-increasing army of men and women who have experience of this excellent medicine generally use some such phrase as "priceless" or "Worth a guinea a box" when speaking of Beecham's Pills. This is certainly high praise. But it is well-merited. Beecham's Pills have proved, times out of number, to be a "priceless" preparation in the treatment of digestive ailments. They bring relief; they safeguard the health; they effect remarkable cures. All who suffer in any way from biliousness, sick headache, constipation, impaired appetite, and the resulting loss of energy and want of tone should take must be speedily taught that a new day is dawning for the game which they have chosen as theirs, and that in its light the evil tactics tolerated or smiled upon before will attract chastisement as soon as the rod can be brought.

As for the promoters who were chiefly responsible for the disputes into which boxing was allowed to fall, it is to be hoped that none of them will be allowed to creep back into the game in any guise. Even though they protest reformation, it is likely to be with the tongue in the cheek, and the clean-cut manhood responsible for the revival of the sport and for its auspicious launching cannot afford to take chances with men of the type mentioned.

the left bank of the Yangtze just at the point where the river escapes from the long chain of rapids and gorges that imprison the channel for a distance of 350 miles. The city is the head of ordinary navigation and long has been the place of transshipment of labour and outbound cargo from steamer to junk or vice versa. It is about ten miles above Ichang that the famed scenery of the river gorges begins where the stream is only a mass of swirling white rapids and where only the native junks laboriously dragged upstream by low lines run to coolie gangs afford a chance to go. The population of Ichang is upwards of 40,000 of which only a handful are foreigners.

Later steamer traffic in the upper river above Ichang has been established through the use of boats specially constructed and with power plants designed to cope with swift waters of the rapids.

MANY ROBBER BANDS

Through the summer and fall months the Ichang district and, in fact, the entire upper river has been bandit-ridden, numerous bodies of brigands having been met with at points all along the river. Several months ago one of the Robert Dollar vessels while proceeding downstream was attacked at a landing place by about 100 robbers who took possession of the vessel and were driven away only through the fortunate circumstance that an American gunboat came to the steamer's assistance.

Numerous stories of outrages and depredations of robber bands who respected the foreign traveler as little as the Chinese junkman formed the basis of a protest raised particularly by foreign commercial enterprises doing business with Szechuen and upriver points. One outcome of this was that troops to quell the activities of the bandits were dispatched by Chinese authorities and yesterday's report from Ichang has given rise to the belief here that some part of these troops have thrown in their lot with the brigands and joined them.

Mr. Mason And The Japanese

WE are indebted to the Japan Chronicle for the news that Mr. Jack Mason, representative in the Far East of the News Enterprise Association of the United States, is being harried by the Japanese police. They have tried to question him and he has refused to answer them. That they have not arrested him is probably due to their recent experience in the Shaw case. And we hazard the opinion that the Japanese police are more harried than Mr. Mason is.

It seems that they attempted to examine Mr. Mason because of an article which he wrote for the N.E.A., descriptive of the Imperial House of Japan. The N.E.A. is a syndicate which supplies news and travel stories and pictures to a large number of newspapers in the United States. Most of the newspapers published the article in question just as it was written, but one of the Pacific Coast editors, having a fight on his hands in behalf of the Alien Land Law, which was aimed at the Japanese, gave a twist to the article which offended the Japanese, and this started the trouble. Or, at least, the Japanese police seized on this article as an entering wedge, the purpose being to pry into Mr. Mason's affairs.

We are inclined to think, however, that it was Mr. Mason's careful investigation of and report on the Nicolalevsk affair, that was at the bottom of the attempt to put him on the grill. Our contemporary, the Japan Chronicle, comments as follows:

"Some months ago Mr. Mason who represents a syndicate of American newspapers, wrote an article on the Imperial House of Japan, prompted, apparently, by the regrettable illness of his Majesty the Emperor. We are informed that the article was quite unobjectionable in its original form. Unfortunately, one of the newspapers on the Pacific coast put in the article adorned with some very objectionable headlines, and furthermore, it is stated, inserted certain passages in the article that were not in the original manuscript to bring it into conformity with the sensational headlines. Notwithstanding the alterations and insertions, however, the signature was allowed to remain of 'Jack Mason.' As soon as copies of the newspaper arrived in Japan, the police began to make inquiries regarding the whereabouts of Mr. Mason, and on finding he had left the country, with their usual lack of perspicacity they began to worry every one in the country bearing a similar name."

"About a week ago Mr. Mason returned to Japan, and from the moment he landed he was shadowed by the police. According to the Japanese papers, the police proposed to examine him, but he declined to be examined, taking the ground, apparently, that whether the article in question was objectionable or not, it was published outside Japanese jurisdiction. In this he is clearly justified. Had it not been for the trouble in which the Japanese Government has been involved by the proceedings taken in the case of Mr. Shaw, there is little doubt that Mr. Mason would have been arrested, and the Japanese Government would have found itself engaged in a dispute with the United States. It has been saved from this by the publicity given to the Shaw case, which has prevented the police taking action that would have brought a very strong protest from the United States on the lines of the Cutting case already referred to in our columns. For it is worth pointing out that the ground of action would have been almost identical with the Shaw case.

"It is specifically laid down in the Criminal Code of Japan that offences against the Imperial House are justiciable in Japan, even when committed in another country by an alien who is not a Japanese subject, should the accused person venture within Japanese jurisdiction. How strictly the doctrine of less majesty is construed in Japan it is unnecessary to point out. Article 76 of the Criminal Code may easily be applied to a writer who, accustomed to the greater freedom of expression of other countries, may indulge in a frank criticism which he had no intention of making either 'insulting or disrespectful.' In making investigations and attempting to examine the alleged author of the article in the Pacific coast journal to which we refer, the police are doing just what it might be expected they would be unwilling to do—they are drawing attention to an article that would probably never have been heard of in Japan if it were not for their own action."

"On the issue raised by this case and that of Mr. Shaw the attitude of the United States Government has never changed from the principle laid down by Secretary of State Calhoun in 1844: 'We hold that the criminal jurisdiction of a nation is limited to its own dominions and to vessels under its flag on the high seas, and that it cannot extend to acts committed within the dominion of another without violating its sovereignty and independence.'"

Of course the Pacific Coast editor was not justified in changing the article sent out by the N.E.A. But a little investigation by the Japanese police would have resulted in their coming into possession of the article as it was originally prepared. Mr. Mason, as a matter of fact, is reporting events in the Far East as he finds them, and so long as he does this, the Japanese have no quarrel with him. Rather, their quarrel is with themselves. They are engaged in a widespread campaign of misrepresentation in the United States, in order to conceal and camouflage their own acts and policies.

We received, yesterday for instance, the following letter from two residents of Shanghai:

"Dear Sir—Your paper has the reputation of being fair, just, honest and truthful in reporting conditions and happenings in Shanghai and Korea, and so its readers had no occasion to question the truthfulness of the report of the visit of the American Congressmen to Korea. Imagine then our indignation today as we read in the October 23, 1920 number of the Literary Digest an account of the visit of the American Congressmen to the East in which, quoting from the New York World, it is said, 'In Korea they were threatened by ignorant and rough Koreans.' As the party left Mukden Manchuria, on a luxurious special train of the South Manchuria Railway Company, as the guests of the President of the company, they learned the news that some Koreans had broken loose six miles on the previous day to derail the special train and harm the American statesmen and party. The railway company and the Japanese authorities had to guard the railway line all day and night to insure the safe travelling of the party."

"Nobody is able to understand comprehensively why and how agitated Koreans intended to harm the American guests, while it was said that Koreans desired to have the help and assistance of the United States to effect their object of independence. The only explanation possible is they intended to harm the visiting Americans and thereby cause an international complication between Japan and the United States although such an explanation is a very poor one."

"Two days before their arrival at Seoul one Korean with three high explosive bombs and several others with rifles and pistols were arrested and according to their confessions, they planned to kill every one of the American Congressional party and Japanese officials when the party arrived at Seoul. The arrest of those Koreans was fortunate indeed, but the Japanese authorities took every precaution to safeguard the American visitors. The street from the railway station to the Chosen Hotel, where the party spent the night, was lined by police men, and not a soul was seen on the street, as every one was kept out of it."

"They were given a most hearty welcome everywhere in Japan, but some precaution had to be taken by the Japanese police to prevent any Korean in Japan from making any foolish attempt on the visiting Americans."

"However, except the experience of travelling through Korea amid all sorts of threats and dangerous reports the party had a really good time in the Orient."

We hope THE CHINA PRESS will answer this. If it does not choose to do so and will send us a copy of the paper containing the true account of the Congressmen's visit to Korea, we will be very glad to forward it to the Literary Digest with an accompanying letter of explanation. Yours sincerely,

HARRIET LOVE, M. D.
MARY HOOD, R. N.

Readers of THE CHINA PRESS will know how unfair and how untrue the report sent to The New York World was, for we exposed these falsities at the time. The Japanese Government did not want the Congressional party to go to Korea, and through its agents it circulated every sort of alarming rumor in order to dissuade the party from its proposed trip. These agents, when all else failed, even got up a cholera scare.

The reports that the Koreans were going to wreck the party or bomb it, were of course, too ridiculous. The Koreans wanted the party to visit them. They wanted the truth to be known. The Japanese, were the ones who wanted to stop the investigation. They went so far as to clear the streets of Koreans to keep them from meeting the congressmen and stopped all demonstrations in their honor. They even broke up a meeting of Koreans who were being addressed by an American Congressman, as we reported at the time.

The Japanese police will do well to investigate their own lies. They cannot hold Mr. Mason 1844. "We hold that the criminal jurisdiction of a nation is limited to its own dominions and to vessels under its flag on the high seas, and that it cannot extend to acts committed within the dominion of another without violating its sovereignty and independence."

Of course the Pacific Coast editor was not justified in changing the article sent out by the N.E.A. But a little investigation by the Japanese police would have resulted in their coming into possession of the article as it was originally prepared.

A Reutergram yesterday hinted that Germany was almost ready to say she was sorry. I suppose she now knows the "essentials" of the war.

SUPERSTITIONS

Don't tell me that there lives any man or woman who is not superstitious. The couple of gipsy looking females who paraded Nanking Road a short time back, got many a good dollar by holding a human hand, gabbling some esperanto-like words and then telling you that your luck would change—as if there is anything new in that. Luck! It's changing everyday, and going the same way as exchange.

Why there is hardly a soul who doesn't believe that to have a wart on the tip of the nose, especially if it be a wart of the hairy variety, is distinctly unlucky.

I am one of those who believe it is really unlucky to fall downstairs on a Friday or to come up against Jimmy Quayle on a Saturday, or to lose your purse on the thirteenth of the month. (Not that the purse contains much by that time of the month.)

But, listen, I honestly can't see why it is unlucky to meet a black man in the dark, because if a man were very black, and the night very dark you might not know that you had met him at all. Still, there are many things hidden from us that we know little or nothing about until they come with a crash. For instance even if Carpenter does not meet Dempsey on a Friday, the thirteenth, there's bound to be one of those two wearers of the padded gloves sorry that he ever was such a fool as to try and stop the other's advance.

But reverting back to gipsies again. I do agree that it is lucky to cross a gipsy maiden's hand with silver—lucky for the gipsy maiden, of course. And again I also agree that it is wise to crack an egg one's self. It may be the only one there is in these hard times.

But don't tell me black cats are lucky. That all depends upon circumstances. The black cat I caught eating my dinner last night wasn't lucky—Anything but—She didn't get away in time. And then my "Share-of-time" and then my "Share-of-time" told me that I should not have touched a black cat, that something was bound to happen to me.

And of course something did happen. I went to bed hungry. A birthday party may be unlucky but take care of the night before—and the morning after will take care of itself.

There's any amount of lucky and unlucky people in Shanghai. Those who "do" are the lucky ones, and those who "don't" are done—so there!

The man who thought he was lucky to get his wife a passage to England when exchange was favorable now knows he is distinctly unlucky, for she is dearest to keep with everything dearer, and the dollar going lower daily, and now he hears she's coming back to be dearer to him than ever.

Too bad that the blooming idiot is so seldom nipped in the bud.

But I digress. Here is a contributed paragraph which shows how lucky it is to work in Shanghai:

Our Export Manager you know is now handling hairnets in retail.

Our Sundriesman is selling needles by the box.

Our Hardwareman is doing old horseshoes in the Continental Hotel.

Our Piecegoodsman is selling railroad tickets for the interior. Our Typists are knitting sweaters for a dozen sweethearts by the case.

Our bookkeeper is writing I.O.U. compradors by the dozens. And all this has been organized and is supervised by our GENERAL MANAGER.

"TAXI"

Thousands of vocalists, professional and amateur, who have sung his words in "Where My Caravan Has Rested," "Until," "Because," etc., are unaware that Edward Teschemacher, the author of them, is the same person who writes under the pseudonym "Edward Lockton," certainly the most prolific of versifiers for ballads. Lockton's great grandfather was a Pole; hence the name "Teschemacher," which name having no Teutonic sympathies whatever, but very much the reverse, he changed when war

The Postponement Of Life: II.

Don't Postpone Love

BY THE SPECTATOR

Don Pedro of Brazil, when asked why North America was so much more advanced than South America and what was the secret of this state of things, replied: "Masana! (Tomorrow!) You North Americans never wait; we always wait."

Over business men's desks I have seen a little card stuck up on which was printed in big, red letters: "Do It Now."

While these two instances apply to success in business, they are just as applicable to success in the game of life. Put a little heart's ease, a little love, a little wonder and worship, a little wisdom, a little rest, a little gladness into this Day! You may not have another.

Now for a few practical hints on how to do this.

First, remember that the thing most worth while in life, the thing that makes it taste best as we go along and that we most rejoice to remember and least wish to forget when it's all over is—Love. So allow no day to pass without expressing love somehow to someone.

It may be a fellow workman you like. Don't postpone handing him a compliment, saying something to him you know will make him feel good. Go out of your way to do something that will warm his heart.

It may be your little girl. You're tired, of course, and worried, and her childish exuberance annoys you. But wait! She is slipping away from you every minute. The time will come soon enough when she will be no longer yours, looking up to you for a drop of gentleness. So, take time. Give her five minutes, anyway, and a hug or two, and a warm word from dad for her to remember.

It may be the little boy. The time's coming when you'll want nothing so badly as that your boy confide in you and not withdraw himself. Therefore invest now in some kindness and fellowship. Don't put it off.

It may be your wife. Never a woman lived that didn't want attention and flattery and to be prized. No matter how absorbed you are in important business, no matter how great your hurry to get to the lodge or to the meeting, take a few minutes and devote them entirely to the all-important business of making that woman think she is the most interesting and vital affair in the world.

Don't economize in love. It's the one treasure that grows bigger the more you take from it, the one valuable thing in which it pays to be a spendthrift. Give it away, throw it away, splash it over, empty your pockets, and tomorrow you'll have more than ever.

Then there's the old mother. If she sits by your fireside, let no day pass without some time devoted just to her. If she is far off, let no Sunday pass without some writing to cheer her heart.

Also, don't postpone play. No day ought to go by without some hour or so of just diversion, letting go. Play a game. Go to the moving picture show. Have a pipe and a bit of gab with your neighbor on the back porch. Do something useless every day.

I suppose there is not a single galley-slave chained to his office desk, not one prisoner of efficiency, not one busy housewife or toiling worker but has dreams of the day when he can let go, and "loaf and invite his soul." Over the thing we have to do floats the vision of the thing we long to do. Every normal human being wants to play a bit. And most of us make the mistake of thinking that we will play "sometime." Why not now? Why not plan your day's program so that you can get an hour to do that delightful, useless thing that relaxes you? Work a puzzle, or play a game of whist, or golf, or tennis, or read a novel, or have a chat with your cronies, or just lie abed and wiggle your toes.

Somebody asked a very busy and efficient man when he took his vacation. "Every day," he answered. He arranged his day so that every twenty-four hours found room for a little redeeming nonsense.

Be efficient. But not too darned efficient. There is an efficiency that overreaches itself and fritters away into inefficiency. Keep on working nights and Sundays and before long you will have no powers to work with.

Runyon: On Coffee Making

BY DAMON RUNYON

It is a depressing fact that coffee making isn't what it used to be in this country.

The coffee in the raw is doubtless up to the same old standard, but what is being done to the coffee in pots and percolators in these United States of America is a sin. It really should be made a crime. The coffee drinkers of the nation should get together and pass laws to make the abuse of coffee in the cooking an offense punishable by deportation to Germany. Bad coffee makers would be perfectly at home in Germany.

Coffee making used to be one of the most magnificent of arts in America. Now you can probably name the truly great coffee makers of the country in a short paragraph.

My friend, Colonel Boggsman Bulger, of Lynbrook, Long Island, is one. My friend, Colonel Bulger, can take a quart of coffee and a pint of water and with a little stewing produce an elixir that will grow hair on a billiard ball.

He is, alas! one of the few survivors of a vanishing race.

The coffee, you get nowadays, especially in hotels and restaurants is a weakish matter and not good to the taste. They make it early in the morning in many places and let it stand all day, merely adding water to the exhausted grounds as fast as one boiler full of coffee is drawn off. It is further hampered by a species of cream cut down to about twenty proof by the addition of water. Yet nowadays in hotels and restaurants they charge you from ten to forty cents per cup for this singular mixture.

In the old days you could get a cup of the best coffee that ever came out of a pot for a nickel. In those days a man couldn't lug away forty cents' worth of coffee in a tub. There were places which even threw in a couple of doughnuts with every cup of coffee, and "donking" was a popular pastime.

"Donking" was dipping the doughnut in the coffee.

Conservation of coffee is doubtless one reason for the decline of coffee making. Then I claim the advance of the percolator is partly responsible. The percolator causes coffee makers to get careless and to permit the coffee to attempt too much for itself.

I do not object to percolator coffee if it is allowed to perk long enough, but I must say I rather incline to the good, old-fashioned, pot-made dram, with maybe an egg broken into it to lend it flavor.

And strong. None of this modern day tea-colored red stuff for me.

Few women can make good coffee, though all women think they can. It takes a husky man properly to manufacture the right sort of caffeine brew, a man with a liberal hand and a highly developed taste for coffee.

Women are too casual and stand offish when it comes to making coffee. I am not in favor of woman-made coffee. It is a man's job, but you must get the right man.

I have investigated carefully for years, and I have as yet been unable to discover what it is they do to coffee on dining cars to make it so bad. It must be a secret process. I have encountered good coffee on but one railroad in America, and I have been over most of them. That was on the Pennsylvania, between New York and Philadelphia.

I do not claim the coffee on this run is uniformly good, but it was good on the occasion I have in mind. Perhaps it was an accident; certainly it was against dining car precedent.

The best coffee in this country is made in some of the higher grade hotels in New York. It ought to be pretty good, because they charge enough for it. It isn't as good, however, as it was some years ago. The Boston hotels used also to have great coffee, and I regret to report a serious decline in that sector. The South once had a great reputation for its coffee and coffee makers. I judge they existed mainly in private homes, for outside of a few cities below the Mason and Dixie Line I never found coffee in Southern hotels and restaurants that caused me any excitement.

New Orleans, yes; Norfolk, yes; Richmond, yes. I do not recall many others. The Middle Western towns, in the old days, were never noted for good coffee, and it has not improved with the passing years. As for the Rocky Mountain West, I can only say that it is my home country, and I do not believe in a man knocking his home country.

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper

is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

Avoid disappointment by refusing substitutes which do not possess its advantages. Of all Decorators.

The moon is going to be good to us this month and come out full on Christmas night.

ON STAR-GAZING

Many people think that life on this earth is too serious to spend any of it gazing at the stars. So wrote a correspondent not long ago, and he claimed to represent the opinion of eight million people living in his particular part of the world.

That governments as well as private groups of individuals of the civilized world believe in the value of the study of the starry firmament is witnessed by the many millions of dollars spent annually on the building and upkeep of astronomical observatories, with their costly telescopes and other scientific instruments. Nothing in the world exceeds the precision of the apparatus and appliances used for observing the heavenly bodies.

But we do not need to own an observatory in order to appreciate the glory of the heavens. The shepherds of Chaldea, the sailors of Phenicia, the soldiers of Troy, and all ancient peoples from China to Peru, looked at the starry vault with an amazing amount of interest and knowledge that would put to shame many a wise scholar of the present day. Any one of us can by a little reading and some occasional observation learn enough of interest about the bright stars of the sky to fill our minds with wonder and awe.

As we look at the stars tonight, there are just six stars whose names we ought to know, and concerning which we can easily learn a few elementary facts of interest. We might well regale ourselves with mythological stories of the mighty heroes and beautiful heroines whose names were associated by the ancients with the stars above, for in that way we learn much of human nature and society in those far off days. But let us be satisfied this evening to know the real facts about these bright stars that stand out from their fellows and invite our attention.

DIAMOND-LIKE VEGA

First is Vega, the brightest star north of the equator, though it would take five stars as bright as Vega to equal Sirius, which will soon show its splendor in our evening skies. Vega is not easily mistaken, if we have a general idea of where to look because it is so very bright and outstanding. In the early evenings it may now be seen in the north west, almost on a level with the North Star. Its color is a bluish white, and its dazzling brilliance recalls to us the jingle of "a diamond in the sky" perhaps better than any other star.

Vega is reckoned to be from twenty-five to thirty-five "light years" distant; that is, it takes the light from Vega those many years to reach us, though light travels at the enormous speed of 186,000 miles per second. If our own sun were as far away as that, but Vega is at least 160 times as brilliant as our sun.

About 14,000 years ago Vega was our north star, and in another 11,000 years it will again occupy that position. That is not because the star changes its place but that the earth's axis turns slightly, and in a period of 25,000 years describes a huge circle in the sky, of which Vega and our present North Star are on almost opposite ends of the diameter. In addition to this Vega is the star toward which our sun, accompanied by all its planets, is travelling at the rate of twelve miles a second, 400,000,000 miles a year.

We get all this free ride in addition to the six hundred million miles around the sun every year! We might think that journeying as we do year in year out, in a straight line at such tremendous speed, the scenes of the heavens would greatly change, just as the view of the country changes when we are sitting in a railroad train. But the stars which form the scene along our celestial highway are so remote that the distance travelled by our sun in a year, or even in many centuries, is of no account.

When those who built the pyramids looked up at the skies they saw the stars grouped in constellations almost exactly as they are at present. If, however, we keep on in the same direction as we are going now, and Vega continues to come toward us as now at the rate of 25,000,000 miles per year, it will be nearly three hundred thousand years before we get within shouting distance of Vega.

DENEK 11,000 TIMES OUR SUN
Not far from Vega is Deneb, at the right angle of a triangle formed by itself, Vega, and the North Star. It is at the head of the Northern Cross, which now stands out clearly right side up, four stars making up the lengthwise part, three the cross beam. Deneb is one of the faintest of those known as first magnitude stars, of which there are only twenty in all the skies. But that is only because it is so far away, for in reality it is almost the very brightest of all.

Astronomers do not know exactly how far, but it is at least five hundred "light years" distant, and its actual brilliance is said to be eleven thousand times as great as that of our sun. Think what that must mean to the planets around Deneb! Can you imagine what is the use of such a prodigious luminary, at so enormous a distance from us?

ALTAIR, THE EAGLE

South of Vega and Deneb, and making an acute angled triangle with them, is a bright star on the opposite side of the Milky Way. It is Altair, with two faint attendants on either side, the three forming a straight line which points direct to Vega.

Altair is only about half as bright as Vega, and as it is also less than half as distant, we can judge that it is really not nearly so bright. But even so it is declared to have actually twelve times as much light giving power as our sun. For a beautiful Chinese legend about Vega and Altair, the Cowherd and the Spinning Maiden, ask your Chinese friends.

CAPELLA, THE SHE-GOAT

Turning now to the north east, we shall have no difficulty in finding Capella, the She-goat, accompanied by three fainter stars, to the right and above, known as the Kids. Capella is almost as bright as Vega, and is of a creamy white color, not perhaps as pleasing to the eye. It is farther away than Vega and is in reality nearly twice as big, making her about three hundred times as brilliant an object as our sun.

Capella is a spectroscopic binary, which means that it consists of two stars, which cannot be separately distinguished even with the largest telescopes, but of which the spectroscopic reveals "the family secret." Two huge stars, each more than a hundred times as big as our sun, at a distance from each other of a hundred million miles, revolve around each other once every 104 days.

ALDEBARAN, EYE OF BULL

Farther south we see Aldebaran, found at the end of the letter "V", which is made up of five fainter stars. This is part of the constellation known as Taurus, or "The Bull," by the ancients, and called the "White Tiger" by the Chinese. The fiery red eye of the bull, or tiger, is said to be forty-five "light years" away, and to shine there with a brilliancy exceeding our sun's 110 times.

The whole group comprising the "V" is an interesting one and has been the subject of minute study by astronomers. It is called Hyades and consists of thirty-nine stars, whose size and distance have been carefully measured or estimated. They constitute a cluster of stars occupying an enormous space, all of which move in the same direction with almost equal speeds. From one side to the other of the group is a distance two million times the distance from the earth to the sun, or about thirty "light years."

SEVEN SWEET SISTERS
Another part of the constellation of Taurus is the well known group of the Pleiades, about which perhaps more has been written in ancient and modern times, in poetry, myth, and science, than any other group. They were spoken of as the seven sisters among the Greeks, the hen and chickens in Europe, the seven little eyes by the savage tribes of the South Pacific; the Arabs pictured them as a group of riders on camels, the Australians saw in them a group of girls playing the Corroboree or festive dance, and the Persians compared them to a cluster of jewels, a rosette of diamonds. Perhaps the prettiest description is that of Tennyson, when he says that they

"Glitter like a swarm of fire flies tangled in a silver braid."

"Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades?" said the old Hebrew poet. In olden days people believed that the stars influenced their lives, and among them the Pleiades were the most kind and benevolent. It was said that on November 17, the date when this group crosses the meridian at midnight, "No petition was ever presented in vain to the Kings of ancient Persia." These stars are small and dim, one only being of the third magnitude, and all the others of the fourth and fifth, yet they seem to seize your attention at your first glance upward by the loving look of their pure and steady gaze.

You will be greatly surprised if you look at this group with a good opera glass or small telescope, for then instead of seven small stars, a larger number of bright stars bursts on your view. You will be able to count ten, twenty-five, fifty, or a hundred. Large telescopes show many more, and by means of photographic plates long exposed as many as 7,000 stars have been discovered in that group, covering only one square degree of area in the sky.

We cannot tell exactly how far away they are, but they are at least two hundred "light years" distant, and many individuals among these 7,000 stars are from ten to a hundred times as brilliant as our sun. Not only that, but that little group of tangled up fire flies, that we should like to clasp in the palm of our hand, is so vast and wide spread that it takes several years for the light to shine from the stars of one side of the group to those of the other side.

"The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork."

PACIFIC ISLANDS
NOT NAVAL BASES

Captain Nomura, Aide To Navy
Minister, Denies Congressman Dyer's Charges

NOT THINKING OF WAR

Officer Says Only Police Are Stationed On Mandatories,
As Can Be Verified

Tokio, Nov. 23.—Commenting on an Armistice Day Address at St. Louis, Missouri, by Congressman Leonidas C. Dyer in which the Missouri legislator said that Japan is erecting gigantic fortifications in the Marshall, Caroline and Ladrones Islands, Captain K. Nomura, aide to Admiral Kato, Minister of the Navy, has informed Kokusai that "any reports to the effect that Japan is fortifying any of the islands of the Pacific over which this country holds a mandate, or planning to fortify any of them or establish naval bases on these islands, is wholly and completely an invention devoid of any truth."

Captain Nomura stated that he might be quoted as speaking in the name of the Minister of the Navy in the matter. Congressman Dyer was a member of the American Congressional party which visited the Far East last summer.

HAVE PLACED ONLY POLICE

"There have been numerous reports of this nature," Captain Nomura said, "mainly in the Hearst papers, and all pure and simple inventions. Japan is acting strictly and honorably in accordance with the mandate conditions laid down in the League of Nations covenant and its annexes which obligate the respective mandator's of Pacific islands not to use them in any way for the strengthening of the military or naval power of the respective mandatories. Japan is, accordingly, keeping only such minor forces on the mandate islands under her charge as may be necessary to deal with such local disturbances as may occur. These are policing forces only."

"There is no man in the Japanese Navy who is thinking of any aggressive war against the United States. Our naval men are studying all the time how best to defend the shores of Japan in the event of a war and there is nothing in our defensive schemes that calls for the fortification of any of the mandated islands, even were we permitted to fortify them.

ISLANDS CAN BE VISITED

"Again, while there are numerous places which serve as harbors in these islands, there is, so far as I know, no really good harbor capable of being developed into a great naval base, such as the American Navy has, for instance, at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, or Cavite. We have not even a coaling station nor a submarine supply base on any of these islands, because to have such would be to use the islands for our military advantage, such as is forbidden. As a matter of fact, although permission would have to be secured from the Naval Department, there is nothing to stop any independent investigator from visiting these islands. The trip is made by regular steamers under contract with the Naval Department, but naturally these are not first class liners.

"While we regard these islands for administrative purposes as an integral part of Japan, making it essential that foreign ships secure permission before touching at the islands for trading purposes, there have been a number of Australian schooners trading in and out of the islands of the various groups, and if we had been erecting fortifications we could not have kept the matter secret."
